Nurturing Excellence in Finance and Accounting Research

In our commitment to fostering academic growth and collaboration, we are delighted to announce the PhD Mentoring Session — a comprehensive and competitive program tailored for PhD students specializing in Finance and Accounting.

During this session, PhD students attending FMARC 2024 will have the unparalleled opportunity to engage with seasoned mentors, gaining targeted guidance to enhance the impact of their research. Additionally, PhD students will explore potential career paths, receiving valuable advice on navigating the academic landscape, the job market, and their professional development.

This session is particularly well-suited for students in the developmental stages of their PhD theses who also want to seize the opportunity to showcase their work via a pitching-style presentation, share insights and discoveries with peers, and receive constructive feedback from distinguished mentors.

Guidelines for PhD Students

PhD students in the early stages of their studies with a paper, interested in delivering a short, pitching-style presentation, are encouraged to submit their work in the PhD Mentoring Session. To choose this option, please submit your work using the link “PhD Mentoring Session Submissions” and select the topic “001 – PhD Student (Mentoring Session).” Ensure you also choose additional topics to specify your paper’s area of research.

PhD students with a completed (or job market) paper, are encouraged to submit their work for presentation in the regular conference sessions. To choose this option, please submit your work using the link “Paper Submissions (regular sessions)” and select the topic “002 – PhD Student (Regular Sessions).” Ensure you also choose additional topics to specify your paper’s area of research. Only papers presented by PhD students in the regular conference sessions will be eligible to be considered for the «Best Doctoral Paper Award».

PhD students at the very early stages of their studies without any paper could register to attend the conference and attend the PhD Mentoring Session.
